The National Wetlands Newsletter is published bimonthly by the Environmental Law Institute. Subscription price is $48 for six issues. Direct editorial inquiries to Gwen Arnold, 202-939-3819 or arnold@eli.org. For subscription inquiries, contact ELI at 1-800-433-5120, 202-939-3844, 202-939-3817 (fax), or orders@eli.org. ELI has an active wetland research program most recently known for publications such as State Wetland Program Evaluation: Phase I (2005) and Banks and Fees: The Status of Off-Site Wetland Mitigation in the United States (2002). For more information about the Wetland Program at the Environmental Law Institute, please contact Roxanne Thomas, ELI Science and Policy Analyst, at thomas@eli.org, call 202-939-3827, or review the website at <http://www.eli.org>.

ELI is a nationally recognized center for research and education on environmental policy, law, and management. An independent, tax-exempt, and nonpartisan institution, the Institute provides information, research, and policy analysis to a broad constituency of professionals in law, government, finance, business, advocacy, and academia.

ELI publishes research reports and briefs that present the analysis and conclusions of the policy studies ELI undertakes to improve environmental law and policy. In addition, ELI publishes several journals and reporters—including the Environmental Law Reporter, the Environmental Forum, and the National Wetlands Newsletter—and books, which contribute to education of the profession and disseminate diverse points of view and opinion to stimulate a robust and creative exchange of ideas. Those publications, which express opinions of the authors and not necessarily those of the Institute, its board of directors, or funding organizations, exemplify ELI's commitment to dialogue with all sectors. ELI welcomes suggestions for article and book topics and encourages the submission of draft manuscripts and book proposals.
